LUTHER ON FAITH, PRAYER, AND ORDER

The Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg's Institute for Luther Studies promotes in-depth study of Luther and interdisciplinary Reformation scholarship with inclusive, ecumenical, and global perspectives. Established in 1970, the Institute seeks to support both scholarship and ministry, responding to issues facing Lutherans today.

The Rev. Dr. Kirsi Stjerna, Professor of Reformation Church History at Gettysburg Seminary, is the Director of the Institute.

The annual colloquy offers a "critical reassessment of Luther and his heritage," probing Luther's continued significance. The Institute continues to offer students, faculty and the wider church ongoing opportunities to share and deepen understanding of Luther and Lutheran theology in the larger context of Reformation scholarship and ecumenical partnerships.

While at the Colloquy, you are invited to visit the Seminary Fine Arts Council's fall 2010 "Martin Luther" exhibit. Works are displayed in Valentine Hall and the Library Pioneer Room.
