With Claudia Bergmann, students will investigate the use of Biblical texts during the Reformation era. We will explore how Luther’s understanding of the Old Testament was informed by the concept of ad fontes, back to the sources, and how the reformers might have reinterpreted the original meaning of the texts. We will focus especially on the book of Psalms but occasionally explore other key texts, as well. Please, bring your bibles....!

With Scott Moore, we will look at what we have inherited from Martin Luther and Co. What is myth? What is fact? What is important for us to hold onto today some 500 years later? Together we will cover key topics of Lutheran theology along the way as we hone our sense of history and sharpen our theological skills for the upcoming Reformation observance.

Presenters

Claudia Bergmann is a Hebrew Bible scholar and an ELCA pastor who formerly served the congregation in Luther's hometown Eisleben, Germany. She currently works as the project coordinator of the Research Centre "Dynamics of Jewish Ritual Practices in Pharisaic Contexts from Antiquity to the Present" at the University of Erfurt, Germany. Bergmann is a graduate of Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg (M.Div.) and of the University of Chicago (Ph.D., Hebrew Bible). Her dissertation Childbirth as a Metaphor for Civic Evidence from the Ancient Near East, the Hebrew Bible, and 1QH XI, 1-18 was published by De Gruyter.

Scott Moore is a Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg alumnus. He has served parishes in Indiana and Chicago in the United States and has lived and worked in Eisleben, Germany, where Luther was born and died, has worked in Wittenberg, Germany where Martin also worked, and is currently living in Erfurt, Germany and leading prayer in the Augustinian Monastery, again where Luther was a monk, and has been serving as the pastor of the German United Methodist Church in Erfurt. Moore is pursuing doctoral studies at the University of Erfurt in the field of Liturgics.
